Speaker 2 (0:00 - 1:26)

Hi, good evening. We are talking about the interesting improving how concert audiences experience the time before a live performance in music venues through a social and contextual computing that encourages interaction, wayfinding, and feelings of safety. So I really appreciate that you attended your time with me to finish that interview.

And our problem statement is concert audiences often spend a substantial period of time waiting, which means navigating unfamiliar venue spaces, locating friends, and trying to understand what's happening before a performance begins. This time can be feel boring, fragmented, or stressful, which means particularly in crowded venues where patrons may be unsure where to go, how long they can wait, and how to access support. Existing venue communication is often functional but passive, such as signs, announcements, and stuff with directions, rather than timely, social, contextual, and engaging.

So during this interview, I'm going to ask you a few questions, and I will record a video. So my first question is, can you tell me about a time when you were waiting in line or take a check before a concert? What was happening around you, and how did you feel during the wait?

Speaker 1 (1:28 - 2:22)

So actually for this question, I can memorize one time before the concert, and that was a huge crowd when we queued up for the concert last time, and the whole stadium was enormous. Many waiters are selling medicine nearby, some little stuff, and some people were putting on some performance about the sound, which is really fun. As showtime draws near, and everyone rushes to get into the stadium, and eager to enter the venue.

So these things become very crowded, and there was still some order at the ticket-checking gates. So that made me feel so nervous, and maybe made me feel so uncomfortable, because it is really crowded at that time.

Speaker 2 (2:22 - 2:39)

Yeah, exactly. Yeah, that's a pretty serious atmosphere at that time. Have you always thought about, in that scenario, what would make that the way better?

Have you ever thought about it?

Speaker 1 (2:44 - 3:25)

So I don't have any idea about the whole process of getting into the stadium or attending the concert, because there are a lot of different stadiums in different cities that haven't been there before. So I didn't have no idea about how many people the stadium could enter, and also I have no idea how long the queue would be. But I can see roughly how many people, and maybe I have some thoughts about the time estimate.

Speaker 2 (3:27 - 3:45)

Yeah, I'll write it down. So the next question, the second one. I know you have a lot of experience about the large and crowded concert, so can you walk me through what you usually do from the moment you arrive at the concert venue until the performance starts?

Speaker 1 (3:49 - 4:31)

So I always do the things about shooting some videos and send it to my friends, close friends and parents, and I need to tell them about how excited I am. But maybe the internet there is not really good, and the poor network usually prevents the messages from being sent. So maybe I always chat with my friends who come with me to join this concert, because we like the same stars, and we will talk about or discuss the music or listen to music together.

It is really fun.

Speaker 2 (4:33 - 4:53)

Yeah, well, the third one, I want to guide through your memories, one specific memories for that. So can you just describe a specific night when you or someone in your group, which means get separated, lost, or cannot find a meeting spot inside the venue before the show?

Speaker 1 (4:55 - 6:01)

So actually for this question, I remember that it was one concert night, but the concert I can't really clearly remember which concert it is. But I remember that night because me and my friends, we got separated inside the venue, and because our seats were not in the same sections, and we are in different sections, it is really far away and a big stadium. So it is after the show was finished, and the play finished, there are so crowded that were, and also there were no network.

So we could not send each other messages, and there are really good amount of people walking outside. They want to go outside about, they want to go outside from the stadium. So it's really crowded when the show ended, the large crowds headed for the exits at the same time.

So actually, we are not really tall, we felt to locate one another.

Speaker 2 (6:03 - 6:32)

Yeah, let's jump into the question number four. So this is a general question, not really related to one specific location. So think of the time you feel generally unsafe, uneasy or overwhelmed in a crowded venue before a performance begin.

And if you don't have that experience, can you think about some other locations like a train or a festival or a club?

Speaker 1 (6:35 - 7:29)

Actually, for this question, I always try to do some concert in a stadium, it is not so crowded because the stadium, we have the correct seat. But I remember that when I attended some shows in the live house, it is by some not famous people, like the some rock stars, they will hold the concert, little concert in a live house. But in a small house, they are get really extremely crowded because when the show came, when the show began, everyone tried to push forward and to get a better view of the performers, which make the experience really uncomfortable and even unsafe for me, because the people without nothing to hold, it is really easy to fall over and there are more crowded and the people push each other to move forward, it is really dangerous.

Speaker 2 (7:32 - 7:49)

Pretty useful answer. So we jump to the social part, there are three questions about it. So we jump into the question number five.

So at a concert, are you there with people or mostly in your own world?

Speaker 1 (7:52 - 8:19)

Actually, in the concert, I mostly immerse myself into my own world and try to listen and feel the music. And as I consider this is really important for people who join into some concert and it is really important you attended this concert. And this is also what they said a live concert experience apart from the watching recording or videos on social media.

Speaker 2 (8:22 - 8:42)

Yeah, so it's an opposite question for number six. So if you don't have you can just say no, I don't have that experience. That's fine.

So can you just recall a pre-show experience where you end up having a surprisingly good conversation or connection with other identities before the music started?

Speaker 1 (8:44 - 9:22)

Actually, it is really easy for me to answer this question because before many concerts, I buy tickets online, which means I can know a lot of fans who really love these stars as me. And as a result, I always get to know many friends of these singers and always chatting with them. If we share the same departure point, maybe we just departure from the town, so we will travel together.

And on the way, we also discuss about the singer life stories or other related things, which is really enjoyable.

Speaker 2 (9:26 - 9:34)

Do you share music with the people you go with or, for example, before or after the show?

Speaker 1 (9:36 - 10:09)

I love to share music with the travel partners because we know we are all the big fan of the same singers. We exchange their less popular sounds before and after the show, both before and after. And after the concert, we may gain some new feelings about the different performances. And also, we will get to discover some nice new songs we may not heard before.

Speaker 2 (10:11 - 10:35)

So let's jump to the next part about the venue communication. So there's question number eight.

If you have that experience, could you please tell me about the night when the venue communicated before the show?

For example, the signs, announcements, or staff directions, app notifications, or clearly shaped how you and your group behaved?

Speaker 1 (10:39 - 11:11)

So I remember that at one concert night, there are no staff members getting us on how to enter the venue or reminding us to get our QR codes ready at once. As a result, we could not pull off the QR code without the internet access because it is really poor network. And this significantly delayed our entrance time and made us really extremely anxious and fear about we could miss the part of the performance.

Speaker 2 (11:14 - 11:26)

So, for example, in the concert, once you are getting inside to watch the show, is there exist anything that tell you where to go or doesn't have anything?

Speaker 1 (11:29 - 11:53)

Actually, in many concerts, when you go inside, the sign will show you where to go, and the different sections require us or people to take the different staircases to reach our perspective areas. And both the floor markings and on-site staff will help to direct the people to go our destinations.

Speaker 2 (11:55 - 12:10)

Yeah, so thanks for staying with me. Now we can change to the closing part. So there's a summary question about if you can change one thing about the time before the show starts, what would it be?

Speaker 1 (12:12 - 13:15)

I think the most things I want to change before the performance is with the seats. I think it is really hard to change, but maybe for the different stadiums, for the venues, we actually maybe I always attend to some performance from the foreign countries like the Australia, like the America. So it is for me, I don't know exactly where the seats are and how far between the seats and the stage of the performers.

So maybe I want to change the seat when I attended into the stadium and I want to, maybe the seat is really far, so I want to make it closer and try to transfer to the more closer seats. So that's the things I want to change before the show starts.

Speaker 2 (13:17 - 13:29)

Okay, so about the overall experience. So is there anything I should have asked but didn't ask? So if there has, you can mention me about that.

Speaker 1 (13:32 - 13:42)

Actually, I think the whole discussion is really clear and ask me a lot of questions. It is enough.

Speaker 2 (13:43 - 14:00)

All right. So I really appreciate you staying with me and spending your a lot of time to finish that interview. And so I'll record it and transcript these useful questions for our research.

So I'll stop the recording.
